The world's fastest bullet train is named after a bird. The Kyushu Pacific Railways Ltd. train will be officially named the Hakuho at the company's meeting on Thursday. The train will be launched to meet a new train speed record of Mach 9 (760 km/h, 503 mph), set by Japan's JR Hokkaido company in July last year in an experimental "Superman" train carrying 2,000 passengers. In an official announcement, the company said the train will be named "Hakuho" after the Japanese name for a type of sea eagle that hunts and lives on the shores of the Seto Inland Sea. The train, running at up to 320 km/h (200 mph) on a Honshu Shinkansen, was developed to meet the demand for higher-speed transportation in Japan in the postwar era. The company expects the train to be used for the first time in Nagoya-Yaguchi route on Friday, or Oct. 28, and will become the fastest train in the world by a big margin. The Kyushu Pacific Railways Ltd. official said the train's official name was to be decided on before it starts running on the Nagoya-Yaguchi route. The House Judiciary Committee is leading the way on impeachment, ranking Member Darrell Issa said Wednesday. "I think we are at the most critical point we are at in this presidency," Mr. Issa, California Republican
